TUESDAY, SEPT. 25, 1877.

THE MASSACHUSETTS CANVASS

[From the Lowell Courier.]

It is probably true that the people in Massachusetts who are most cheerful over the action at the Republican convention at Worcester are the Democrats. They count upon the election of Mr. Gaston with almost certainty, and their hopes are the counterpart of the fears expressed by over one-half of the delegates present at Worcester. The convention was apparently one of the calmest ever held, and was a constant succession of surprises. It was apparent from conversation with delegates as they arrived from all quarters, that the opposition to Gov. Rice was very widespread, and while from the character of the speeches, and the personnel of the speakers at the anti-Rice meeting Tuesday evening this opposition seemed to be largely due to the Tunnel veto, it was certain that it had its real basis in the fear which was unequivocally expressed—and was admitted even by many Rice men—that the nomination of Rice meant the election of Gaston. There was hardly an exception to the expression from county as well as city, that the prohibitory vote would be very largely swelled by his nomination. But in spite of this the Rice men claimed, even up to the time of taking of the vote, that the opposition to their candidate was insignificant, and the Boston newspaper reporters—especially those of the Rice papers—concurred in the expression that Rice would have a large majority on the first ballot. The result showed that they either very much mistook the signs of the times, or meant that the readers of their despatches should mistake them. The count showed that Mr. Rice had a bare majority of the whole number of votes polled, and less than a majority of all the delegates present, over a hundred of whom had gone to dinner.

The next surprise was the withdrawal of Mr. Long. None of the enthusiastic men who were so jubilant over his prospects as shown by the informal ballot, had any inkling of his purpose, and the announcement of his withdrawal was received with great disappointment. Had there been a couple of energetic, enthusiastic men, who were good talkers, to take the stand and urge the nomination of Speaker Long, and to lead the workers on the floor who anxiously looked for some sign of this kind, he would have stood a most excellent chance of being nominated. But his withdrawal was really only the logical result of his reiterated purpose not to stand in Governor Rice's way.

Senator Hoar's speech was able, and it put the Southern policy and the civil service reform in the most adroit way to disarm a feeling of opposition that was noticeable to the most casual observer. His remarks on the Electoral Commission specie payments and the rights of the blacks were received with generous and general applause; but while no dissent was expressed at his remarks on the other topics, it was easy to see that many of the members did not care to join in the manifestations of approval which were given by others.

The platform was not readily heard by all, and there was no chance for its consideration. The applause, as in the case of Mr. Hoar's address, was not thoroughly warm over the portions relating to disputed points of policy, though but few voices rose in the negative on the question of adoption. The plank endorsing in special terms the civil service order, would certainly have received a heavy negative vote if it could have been submitted as a separate question.

The result on the whole is, as we have indicated, not so happy for the party as we would have wished. But the feeling of disappointment shared by many of the delegates will no doubt be softened by time. For ourselves we repeat that what has been made the chief fault of Governor Rice we esteem one of his chief virtues. That he vetoed the local option bill, which was certainly a license bill, and in our judgment, the most mischievous one ever proposed, is an sign that he would veto a bona fide prohibitory bill. He has made a most excellent Governor as to the general affairs of State administration, and has brought no discredit on that long line of illustrious chief magistrates of the commonwealth to whom Senator Hoar so happily referred. We have thought another nomination would have been more judicious. But the duty of the hour now is to re-elect Governor Rice.

"PITY THE POOR BLIND"

The Portland Advertiser, moved by its peculiar affection for THE WHIG, gives its readers this exclusive information of the result of "the disorganizing course of THE WHIG:"

Penobscot County has not held its relative place in the Republican ranks; has not furnished its proportion of the Republican majority.

In the matter of ——g, it will be perceived that the Advertiser acts on the principle that "it is as well to be hung for a sheep as for a lamb." Penobscot has a little less than twelve per cent. of the population of the State, and its "relative proportion of the Republican majority" of 5,879 thus far reported, would therefore be a trifle less than 705. The Republican majority actually given in this County over all by those returns is 2,149, or three times "the relative proportion." The Advertiser is trying its teeth on a tough kernel when it attempts to belittle the record of that County which alone furnished almost as much Republican majority as the whole of the fifteen other Counties in the State.

The policy papers are raising a tremendous cackle over the statement that some one has written a Massachusetts paper that Senator Blaine told him: "There will be no quarrel between me and President Hayes." If the writer did not report Mr. Blaine's sentiments more correctly than he did his language he is hardly a safe interpreter, for Mr. Blaine does not talk about "me and the President." We did not suppose anybody expected Mr. Blaine to "quarrel" with the President. He will discharge his public duties as a Senator and Republican and will not be likely to diverge from his path either to meet or to avoid any quarrelsome people.

It would seem from the following extract from the President's remarks at Nashville, that there was more curiosity than interest or attention among the gathering of conciliated Tennesseans;

> My friends, you will see by the size of this great crowd, by the noise that comes up to us from all parts of it, that they are not hearing what I say; that I am speaking to those reporters and a small circle around me. It is very interesting to me, but I fear it is not interesting to the rest of you.

BEFORE AND AFTER ELECTION.

We are solicitous that their [the colored people's] rights and interests should be regarded, and our belief, our confidence we may say, was perfect that with the bayonets removed from the South the people of color would be safer in every right in every interest, than they ever were when protected merely by the bayonets.—President Hayes at Chattanooga, September, 1877.

As it is evident that there has been a change of opinion somewhere, we quote some of the former utterances of President Hayes which were published in the biography prepared under his supervision by Col. Conwell and circulated during the last campaign:

"The loyal people of the South need special and powerful protection."

"The authority of the United States ought to be asserted and maintained."

"If you want a Jew faithfully and fairly administered, entrust power only to its friends."

"Until every question arising out of the Rebellion, relating to the integrity of the Nation, relating to the rights of man, relating to the payment of the debt, has been settled, and wisely settled, this people should insist with power to have, wield, direct the great struggle for the nation's life was unfaithful to the cause of Union and of liberty."

"If [the policy of giving the ex-rebel political control in the South] abandons four millions of loyal colored people who lost the protection which owners give their property, when they were made free to save a nation's life, to such treatment as the ruffian class of the South, educated in the barbarism of Slavery and the atrocities of the Rebellion, may choose to give them."

"No argument is, therefore, needed to prove that in return for the allegiance required of every citizen of the nation, wherever oppressed in and unjust State legislation deprives such citizen of protection in the enjoyment of his natural rights, it is the duty of the United States to hold up before him the shield of the Constitution."

There seems to be a tactfulness in quoting here the remark of another of his biographers, W. D. Howells, a relative of the President, that no one could make a "greater mistake than to suppose that if eyes is one of the vulgar sentimentalists who would barter the sacred and terrible memories of the past for a moment of unmeaning ofhsion, one of the witless and heartless mills-in who] befoul in their vernal phrase of the bloody shirt,' the shame of those who died on battle-field and in prison-pen during the war, and has always persisted in the same cause, by a vast majority all over the South."

MORE "PACIFICATION."

The Boston Journal's Washington correspondent telegraphs as follows:

Judge Durham, a prominent practitioner before the United States Supreme Court, is engaged in drafting a bill to give the Court of Claims much larger jurisdiction in the matter of all Southern claims which have been rejected by the Southern Claims commission, either on the ground of disloyalty or fraud. This measure will undoubtedly receive the very general support of Southern members, who intend to open the door of the Treasury to the payment of Southern claims in every manner possible.

The following remarks of President Hayes introducing Wade Hampton at Franklin, Kentucky, indicates a remarkable change of view on the part of somebody as to the "constitutional principle of the Union of States":

> MY FRIENDS: Our time to-day does not permit us to make speeches; we merely have the opportunity to renew our friendship and greeting. I should be glad to see you in Washington, coming to Washington as you do here, to show your respect for the Government of the United States. My friend is, to show you how completely we agree on the constitutional principle of the Union of States, how we are coming together in unity, friendship and harmony; allow me to introduce to you the Governor of South Carolina.

We may be permitted to remark that Wade Hampton has given no indication of having modified his views on the subject of State Sovereignty, and yet the President says they are completely agreed."

The Fitchburg, Mass., Sentinel, evidently thinks that at the dedication of a loyal Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, some regard might be shown for the surviving comrades of the honored dead, notwithstanding the zeal with which it was attempted to make the ceremonies agreeable to those who sought to destroy the Nation. That paper says:

> We venture to say that, except the line of Major-Generals who sat in front of the orator of the day, to whom General Devens must have referred when he used the word "Comrades," and a few of the Loyal Legion, not a soldier or a sailor of Massachusetts was on that platform or within the "reserved spaces" so as to hear one word that was said. We do not complain that the Mayors and a prominent part; but that the rank and file of living soldiers and sailors who were value was not less conspicuous than that of those to whose memory the monument was erected, should have been studiously excluded even from the sight and hearing of the impressive ceremony, was to us a mockery and a shame.

The N. Y. Tribune's special correspondent who is accompanying the President Hayes during his Southern trip, says the barracks of the crowd are very hearty, but that while as a rule fully half of every audience is composed of colored people, rarely was a black man seen to join in the shoutings. "If," he adds, "it had been Gen. Grant making a tour in the South they would have cracked their throats; but they are suspicious of Mr. Hayes for no other reason, because they see the white folks like him." The demonstrations in honor of Wade Hampton are especially enthusiastic, and at one station the audience was so rude as to call for him before waiting to hear the President.

A few days ago, in commenting upon some utterances of the Lewiston Journal we copied its entire article with our criticism. In rejoinder the Journal quotes the one word "it" from our remarks and needs that in a connection in which it did not appear in our article. Of course the Journal thought it could deal more easily with its own statement of our position than with what we really said. But that kind of discussion is not very profitable. We will, however ask the Journal one question suggested by its remarks, viz: When and under what circumstance did President Grant pursue "a similar course to Mississippi" to that "pursued by President Hayes in South Carolina and Louisiana?" That is a favorite plea; let us see what there is of it.

According to reports returned to the State Board of Agriculture the yield of winter wheat in Illinois in 1877 was 29,510,032 bushels; spring wheat, 2,659,621 bushels; total wheat crop, 32,190,656 bushels. It is estimated that 8,035,411 acres have been planted in corn this year and that the yield will be 272,700,121 bushels. The oat crop of the year is reported at 61,145,983 bushels.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTIC LOZENGES.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR

Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Piles, Oppression after Eating, Headache, Dizziness,

For thirty years these Lozenges have retained the confidence of the Medical Profession and the public generally, in spite of all competitors or imitators. They are the most effectual remedy for HABITUAL COSTIVENESS and its results, viz: Piles, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dizziness, Languor, Oppression of Food, Heartburn, Flatulence, Bad Taste in the mouth, Torpid Liver, &c., &c.

Females who cannot endure strong purgatives find these Lozenges admirably suited to their many complaints incident to their sex, by restoring nature and preventing periodical pains and obstructions. They are also just the thing for children suffering with worms, being a sure cure, and as agreeable to take as the most pleasant confection.

Travelers find the Lozenges just what they need, as they are so compact and inodorous that they may be carried in the vest pocket, as the an operation or laxative they are equal to.

Testimony of a Boston Merchant.

BOSTON, May 10, 1875.

This certifies that I have used Dr. Harrison's Peristaltic Lozenges, and after suffering a long time with the Piles I experienced the effect cure, and recommend their use to all afflicted in the same way, without reserve, as especially benefitted with any costiveness.

R. B. FORBES.

From the General Ticket Agent of Montreal and Boston Air Line Railroad.

LYNDVILLE, VT., March 2nd, 1877.

Messrs. F. S. HARRISON & Co. Gents—The business of the line having increased very much, I am obliged to confine myself very closely to office work, and have in consequence been much troubled with constipation. I find in your Lozenges just what I need: not a strong purgative, but an efficient help to nature.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT

IN

Hot Air Furnaces.

Kohler's Patent Wrought Iron, Double Radiating Hot Air Furnace.

This Furnace was first made in Boston in 1875, and so successful has been its operation that it can now be seen in use in Boston and vicinity, some of the advantages of this Furnace are: The large amount of its heating surface and its great proximity of the plates to the fire, thus securing the production of all heat to every part of the house, the two distinct sets of chambers, each of which can be heated separately or together, as desired; the Furnace, the joints are all steam tight, simple construction being used in its construction, thus obviating all danger of escape of gas; there being no place for the ashes to lodge, they fall directly into the ash pit; the mixing arrangement, the water pan, the safe fire are all in keeping with the Furnace and will bear a critical examination. Any one in want of a first class heater is invited to call and look the Furnace over, before which he will be pleased to explain it, should you buy or not.

Great Fire in Washington.

The Patent Office Building Burned.

The Loss of Models, Records, Etc.

SUPPOSED ORIGIN OF THE FIRE.

THE EFFCT ON PUBLIC BUSINESS,

The Patent Office Building on Fire

WASHINGTON, Sept 24 The Patent Office building is on fire The fire broke out in the model room burnt through the roof and is blazing furiously All the engines in the District have gone to the scene

Second Despatch.

The fire is still raging particularly in the Land Office wing of the Interior Department building The flames are also threatening the Post Office building The firemen are working vigorously having succeeded in getting their hose through the windows of the upper story of the main building but in spite of the efforts of the firemen it cannot be said to-day and while the whole of the upper portion of the west wing on 9th street is being burned the flames are also creeping along the centre and roof of the north wing and to the main building The Executive Mansion is also threatened but the immediate danger is over Secretary Chandler and assistants are busily engaged in removing valuable papers and records to place of safety

Removing and Guarding Property

A squad of District militia and a detachment of marines are on duty to-night preparatory to assorting the papers and books and drying all that are damaged by water

New Quarters.

It is said arrangements are already in progress for renting a portion of the Corcoran fire-proof building at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and fifteenth street, in which the work of the Department will be resumed and the records restored as far as possible. Soldiers are on guard to-night and the Patent Office building and will remain till all the records and public property are secured Secretary Schurz and a number of prominent officials remain at the building to-night superintending the removal or destruction and replacing of records

Injury to the Land Office Records

None of the Land Office records were destroyed by fire, but many were seriously damaged by water and it will take some time to restore them The room where the original drawings of patents were kept had a very narrow escape The records of the publication divisions were saved

Models Saved

All the most valuable models saved were those relating to sewing machines, fire-arms locks &c Valuable models were of course injured while being removed but can be repaired This evening Secretary Schurz had a conference with Architect Clark of the Capitol and Superintendent Hill of the Treasury in regard to the re-construction of temporary roofs to the building It is said it will be prepared immediately

An Immense Amount of Litigation

will grow out of the destruction by the fire in regard to specifications which were not complied with until a few years last, and in many cases have not been replaced accurately In the matter of patents destroyed, copies of the models will be used and will result in litigation especially in cases relating to reapers mowers and various agricultural implements All of which were destroyed

The Damage to the Building

City workmen are to-night commenced to remove the debris from the east and west wings The damage to the building is variously estimated from $300,000 to $500,000 while that growing out of the destruction of models and other property is almost incalculable The arch in the centre of the second story and upon which the floor of the third story rested were so badly damaged by flame and water that it may yet be torn down and new ones built

The marble of the outer walls is slightly discolored by the flames and is cracked in many places by heat The roof of the building was not fire-proof and was supported by wooden rafters upon which rested a shingling of white pine boards the whole covered with copper There were no fire walls in the roof to arrest the progress of the flames Chief Engineer Croxton of the fire department expresses the opinion that the fire might have been extinguished in the roof some hour [illegible] from where it was discovered

TIRED MOTHERS

BY MRS ALTERT SMITH

A little elbow leans upon your knee,
Your tired knee that has so much to bear,
And a dear face and looking lovingly
From underneath a clutch of tangled hair.
I do not see the velvet of the cheek,
Or warm, rose fingers, soft as rose leaves be;
You do not mind this pushing away much
You are almost too tired to play to-night.

But it is half a weariness! A year ago
I did not see it as I do to-day—
We are so full and thankless, and too slow
To catch the sunshine till it slips away
And in its wake seems supreme starkness so.
That, while I bore the hair of mother's head,
I felt it less a mere gift and modesty
The little child that lies against me only good

And if some night when you sit down to rest,
You miss this elbow from your tired knee,
The vast room, empty of the little breast
That rises and falls against you heavily,
If from your own the dimpled hand is cold and pale
And no more would nestle in your palm again,
If the white, feet that used to patter fast or quick,
I would not blame you for your heart ache then.

I even long so that I stand there over feet
At little children sleeping in their gown
Or that the floors pieces not as the days are work
Are even less even if I might take them from
If I could find a little muddy boot,
Or cap or jacket on any of amber floor,
If I could kiss a warm, restless foot,
As I hear its voice in my home evermore

If I could mend a broken cart to-day,
Toss great man to a horse, teach them talk,
There is now man in God's world could I say
So was more blissfully content than I
I'd sit the dainty pillow of my own
To your arm, fell by a restless head
My singing blessing from its nest is flown
Little one! I would to kiss a dead

A BOY'S LETTER FROM THE COUNTRY.—Dog-ogends us the following copy of a letter written by a Cambridge boy who is up in the country. Billy, why don't you write me a letter? I am having a bully time but I have to go round on crutches, for a hoss take fell on a hay mop on to me and sprained my legs. A boy from Charlestown named Hookey boards where I do and me and him go round together and have a good time. We catch frogs down in the brook and throw them through the shades on to the tube and scare the board in when they cry, there aint my fellocreation have and you had to fun to the pigeons on to the hog and set em on fire and hear em squeal. Mr. Smith was awful mad about it. I was awful sick last week and I have wore out four pairs of pants since I have been here. When I left home I forget to let my rabbits out and I wish you would go into my back yard and let em out, but I guess they are dead now and if they are you may have em rabbits cent like three weeks without mother to eat of them can they are tuff. I have got three turkies and a crow and a lot of the eggs I shall bring home in my trunk if my mother don't find it out. My mother says I let her to ide the all days she is over I let me go into the country with her again. I can't write any more for me and some more chores to goin down into the pasture and throw stone at some calves. Hookey broke out to his glass in a schoolhouse and his mother will ten dollars.—Boston Globe.

A SMART TRICK.—Just before the declaration of Independence a Yankee peddler sailed down to New York to sell a lot of bowls and dishes he had made of maple. Jonathan traveled over the city calling or rowed by to buy his wares, but no one was disposed to purchase.

He dropped anchor at a British fleet was then lying in the harbor of New York, and Jonathan struck upon a plan of selling his dishes. He got a naval uniform by hook or by crook (for he never does get elsewhere to get it), and strutting up town on morning, asked a merchant if he had any darn wooden ware as the commodore want a lot for the fleet.

The merchant replied that he did not have on hand; but there was some in town and if he would send to the store soon he would supply him with the same.

Very good, said our naval officer, I will call.

For that now eat for hour, by the short cut route and he had hardly dressed his borrowed plumage before down came the merchant, who, hearing the Jonathan had a lot of new wares offered to take the whole if he would deduct fifteen per cent, but Jonathan stood by his guns and would not be driven from his first price.

The merchant finally paid down in gold his price for the entire ware which by the ship boys for a week long days Jonathan and Jonathan trotted home in high glee to the users of his manoeuvre will form a hint to naval British officers in search.

LITTLE INJUN.—The following can not be called an inspired reply to one of the wags' boys, but it has four legs the one foreign to start, which is sharp to the end square. The hind legs the middle one is folded by the joints. Both ears at the front of the animal's head. Both ears at the back of the animal's head. When it runs and it is very dusty. In sing the loudest. His voice is not soft evening as that of the nightingale, but would not keep it on Saturday nights and not forever prefer Isaac to Abraham and Jacob. He has more chest by his long legs than any other creature yet known. By this means he will keep five yards up a tree listening home if to the hounds and men at the foot of the tree. He is from the sign of the tree frog that all America we have acquired the most of the first and last, like a certain part of them in the creation it pretty very clever boys, arbitrary, and philosophic, and so forth with more but what are we to here in the vale.—Down Hooky Coonchecket.

LIVE AND DEAD WEIGHT OF TURKEYS.—Farmers frequently have occasion to sell turkeys by live weight and wish to know what is the fair relative price between live and dead weight. In turkeys dressed for the New York market where the blood and feathers only are removed, the loss is very small. For the Eastern markets the heads are taken off and the entrails are taken out. This makes a loss of nearly one-tenth in the weight. A large gobbler was recently sold, weighing 31½ pounds. After bleeding and picking he weighed 29½ pounds—a loss of two pounds or one fifteenth. When ready for the spit he weighed 28½ pounds—a loss of 3½ pound, which is nearly one-tenth of the weight. When the market requires the New York style of dressing, the price is 25 cents a pound, live weight or less if the labor of dressing be counted anything. In the other style of dressing, if the price were 20 cents, the farmer can sell for 18 cents, or less, live weight, without loss. Farmers who never tested the loss of weight in dressing, often submit to the deduction of three or four cents a pound for the middlemen, who are interested in making this large difference.—Philadelphia Times.

A widowed clergyman recently created quite a sensation in his household, which consisted of seven grown up daughters. The reverend gentleman was absent from home for a number of days visiting an adjoining country. The daughters received a letter from their father stating that he had "married a widow with six sprightly children" and that he might be expected home at a certain time. The effect of that news was a great shock to that happy family. The girls, noted for their meekness and amiable temperaments, seemed another set of beings, there was weeping and wailing and tearing of hair, and all manner of naughty things said. The tidy home was neglected, and when the day of arrival came, the house was anything but inviting. At last the Rev. Mr. ——— came, but he was alone. He greeted his daughters as usual and as he viewed the neglected apartments there was a merry twinkle in his eye. The daughters were nervous and evidently anxious. At last the eldest mustered courage and asked; "Where is our mother?" "In heaven," said the good man. "But where is the widow with six children whom you wrote you had married?" "Why, I married her to another man my dears," he replied, delighted at the success of his joke.

NOT HER FAULT. One of those excrescences on life, a female slanderer, went into a neighbor's house the other morning with her tongue loaded with new venom. There were several women present, and the slanderer's eyes glistened in anticipation. Throwing herself in a chair, she sighed and said:

"One half the world don't know how the other half lives."

"That ain't your fault," quietly observed one of the company.

The slanderer turned yellow.—Danbury News.
